Icecats ready for new season

Andy Gruninger, left, and Rick Bracha, two members of BYU's ice hockey team, take a face-off during an ensuing scrimmage in Bountiful last Saturday.

BYU's ice hockey team will open with a pre-season game Saturday at 4:45 p.m. at the Salt Palace in Salt Lake City.

Mass transit awaits taxpayers

Harry Hardison, owner of Provo City Lines, has his service is only slightly profitable. He said the small number of users have made mass transportation impractical in Utah County.

"For years we had to depend on charter service to make a profit," he said.

But government leaders are still asking for a public transportation system in Utah Valley. Provo City Commissioner of Parks, Wignall said the city has been working on a plan for another vote next year.

The plan for a public transit system is to let the private sector provide a lower rate than it would cost to use an alternative mode of transport and conserve energy," he said.

Bradford said another option for the area is to let local industries to provide bus service for employees. He said carpools often cost less than $100 a month, or 50 percent of local manufacturing workers carpooling to work.

Public transportation available to area residents presently include Trailways and Greyhound bus lines, Provo City Lines, taxicabs, United passenger train service, air service between Provo and Salt Lake City and a limousine service from Salt Lake and Provo.

One of the most inexpensive is the Provo City Lines, which charges 25 cents a mile. Provo City Lines, Buses makes stops every hour.

Early snowfall surprises East

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An "abnormal" October snowstorm surprised the winter sports industry, burying skiers' foliage and snow accumulations up to a foot deep. Homes went up in smoke as fallen trees rotted onto power lines.

It was the earliest snowfall of the century in Washington, D.C., where more than 72,000 utility customers lost their power and a layer of about one inch of ice covered driving treacherously.

It was the earliest snowfall on record in New England, where temperatures of 37° marked the coldest October 10 since 1935.

Value amounts

Snow in varying amounts was reported from the Virginias to New England, but the heaviest falls were in the mountain communities of Appalachia.

Various minor accidents were reported from slick roads in several states. In New York, a school bus carrying 23 high school students and the bus driver suffered cuts and bruising.

In West Virginia, where the storm dumped 12 inches in Canaan Valley, the utility company reported 10,000 to 20,000 people lost their electricity in several counties when trees limbs fell across power lines and snow and ripped down power lines.

Official record

An unofficial record was set in the Blue Hills area south of Boston at 44 hours.

Snow was falling in Boston, Worcester and Springfield.

Among the few who benefited were the ski resorts of New England. The Killington Ski Area at Sherburne, Vt., was buried in snow, the earliest in the history of the area.

By today, snow accumulations in Virginia reached 10 inches in Harrisonburg, eight in Staunton, and five in the hilly areas of Prince William County.

West Virginia recorded 12 inches in Canaan Valley, eight in Pickens, six in Summersville and four in Green Bank.

Stanger stated in his movement for dismissal of the case: "If there is doubt or uncertainty as to whether the offense is criminal or not, the law must be applied as applicable to the offense, the accused is entitled to the benefit of the lesser force."

Stanger said Chipman was charged with a felony because he violated state law, but he did not have reasonable cause to believe a felony had been committed.

BURY Security has come under criticism because of a state law (House Bill 100) that gives private university police full police power.

Stanger has criticized BURY Security officers, saying the new law giving statewide police powers to university police violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

He claims the new law gives the power to enforce Mormon standards off campus, he claimed.

Stanger said he opposes any attempt to enforce religious beliefs with police power.

On Aug. 24 Security officers were sworn in and given statewide police powers with the same court order, Alan Crockett.

"We did not initiate efforts to have the legislature change the law," said Dallen H. Oaks, said. "Once the efforts were instigated, the university community indicated its position.

the constitution of the state," he said.

Newest Y fad gaining speed

By ANITA PENNINGTON
Utah State Staff Writer

The newest fad in Utah Valley, though slow in starting, is fast gaining momentum.

Students are finally feeling the awakening interest in the nation's most recent fad. The local skating rink, which has been around since 1974, also has been affected.

Interest in roller skating has increased to the point that plans are now being made to start a new roller skating club.

Stefan Harlan, a junior majoring in psychology, is the man behind the move for the club.

"We'd like to promote the sport of roller skating to the local skating rink in the area," he said.

Physical exercise and fun are the main reasons for the interest in roller skating, he said.

"It's a lot more healthful than most people think," he said.

Harlan said the main reason for starting the club was the increased interest in roller skating among the current crop of roller-skating has caught on slowly here, but has great potential.

Harlan said a club constitution must be submitted to the ASUU for approval.

He submitted the proposed constitution to the club organization as soon as possible," he said.

manager of the skating rink, said a similar boom in roller skating has occurred in the state.

Government spending rapped by congressmen

By GARY BJELLAND
University Writer
Government increasing taxes and more government spending spurs inflation and creates a "deadweight loss" in government's incentive to the American taxpayer, congressional leaders said Wednesday in response to the proposed $60 billion fiscal budget, which provides for $5 billion in deficit spending.

"The American tax-payers will hit for an additional $10 billion in new taxes," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said. "Such a budget will increase by $11 billion next year and tax increases will continue to grow and moving tax payers will increase by $5 billion."

Both the House and Senate are drafting a final, balanced budget for fiscal 1980. A discrepancy exists between the two bills.

Both the House and Senate have indicated a budget will be proposed before the budget is adopted.

Federal taxes have averaged 18.6 percent of the gross National Product over the past 25 years.

Stagnation

With the proposed

1980 budget, federal taxes will eat up 20 percent of the Gross National Product.

Government spending has continued to grow and our economy has reached a point where it can no longer support the present level of government spending by the federal government," Hatch added.

Taxes are expected to increase in the coming year. The budget Committee does not plan to put incentives back into the economy, the Utah senator said. "An inflationary spiral has been created into higher tax brackets and has destroyed their incentive to work and produce."

The Budget Committee ignored the advice it has received from economists that economic policies which restore incentives will encourage investment," Hatch said.

"There's no spending incentive shift.

Instead, they have chosen to allow the tax burden on the American people to increase even more. Inflation and the progressive tax structure are creating incentives toward consumption and leisure against work, investment and production," Burnett said.

Burnett continues to show the American people how painful it is to have a balanced budget.

They have said the process for a balanced budget by not reducing spending or increasing taxes.

The effect this has had on the American people is that they do not want to pay for the balanced budget.

Loggins and Messina

Performing artists go their separate ways

By WALT HILKER
University Guest Reviewer

The music and the entertainment of Loggins and Messina have come a long way since 1975, not because of failure or anger, but because they left their traditional paths. In those days, Loggins claims, Messina, the veteran, guided Loggins, the novice; they were almost always two composers, but they were also two performers.

Since they disbanded, Kenny Loggins has concentrated in recording, and his own songs have been more prominent. Jim Messina has had a better glimpse to see what was more responsible for the LM sound: how much was responsible for the LM sound? How much was responsible for the LM sound?

In an interview a year ago, I asked Loggins about his long-lost friend Jimmy; he commented that he was gathering a hand of unknown musicians with whom he could record. That's where we now meet Messina has done for the unknown.

A year passed since that observation by Loggins, and the two artists are still there. This year, one can speculate now if the sum of the parts would be more or less than the whole, both have released new albums.

First, Jimmy, the veteran, Messina's debut solo album, "Oasis" (Columbia JC 36140) is a solid effort in many ways.

He wrote or co-wrote all the album's nine selections, often selecting them from his personal repertoire. In the inner sleeve, Jimmy is quoted as profusely praising the quartet, and they deserve his accolades. The album features some well-timed arrangements that sweetened the later L&M music, and gives Messina an opportunity to focus on a more melodic style. The songs range from 30 degrees from country-rock days with Buffalo Springfield in the late sixties to 90 degrees with the trademark Loggins passion and spirit.

Lyrical, Messina has some trouble solving much that is substantive; as Loggins expressed his "no long-to-say" moments in the title track from "Celeste My Home," so does Messina in the opening selection and the current single, "New and Different Way." The song also refers to the changes in Loggins' life, and the changes in his music, which have greater depth in the liner notes. Otherwise, lyrical substance is hard to find.

The Loggins album speaks with instrumentation. The quintet shines like aged veterans under Messina's caring production, particularly on the ballads and closer, "Love Me." Loggins' comments balanced between music and lyrics make him a better guide.

To keep the balance between music and lyrics, Loggins has recorded his second and third solo albums, "Keep the Fire" (Columbia JC 36172) is a solidly made most diverse album to his credit, and the lyrics are more meaningful. The title track is a good example of the casualities of the mind, as the title track.

"But dreams can drift away and sails will fill with drifts." Where's your vision if the embers flicker out? Don't let it slip from view... So keep the fire burning, tonight.

Goodman to conduct SLC concert tonight

The chairman of the BYU music department is to conduct the 19th annual Utah State Orchestra's Grand Festival Concert tonight at 8 p.m. in Highland High School in Salt Lake City.

Dr. Harold Goodman will conduct 100 of the state's best young musicians at 8 p.m. in Highland's auditorium. Tickets are $3.00 each. The musicians are from throughout the state and were selected for the orchestra through auditions and recommendations and auditions.

Along with Dr. Goodman, James C. Johnson is director of lycavets at BYU. He has served as musical director and conductor of the Utah Valley, Utah Valley, Tucson, Northern Arizona, and Tucson Symphonies and others.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Arizona and his master's degree and doctorate from the University of Southern California. In 1973 he was awarded the Carl G. Dahl Master Teaching Excellence Award.

Currently, he is serving as president of the Loggins, apparently ever-reaching for the vibrant sound he achieves in concert for use in his record making, has come closest now, possibly because of the sonorous power of his voice and the richness of Don Dorn's powerful production. The basses of the band are also outstanding. In nine songs, he plays ballads, driving rock, calypso, soul, pop. And each is matched with the most vital performances by Loggins.

As usual, Kenny Loggins wants songs with some personal meaning. "Oasis" (right) and "Doohies" (Mike McDonald; Stephen Bishop, Richard Stokel, and wife, Eva Eberle) are two of the best songs on the album.

With the release of these two albums, particularly the Messina debut "Oasis," Loggins and Messina is now no longer of concern. Loggins has shown in fact creating a new history for himself and for the young musicians he has gathered around him. Loggins has demonstrated how many directions in music he is capable of traveling with his music. The two albums are a good start from the journey. Loggins is Loggins, Messina is Messina, and never again the twin shall meet.

New full-time director named to head Entertainment Division

"Entertainment should be a combination of enjoyment and growth for the audience," says the man chosen as full-time director of BYU's expanding Entertainment Division.

K. Newell Dayley says he feels that programs seen on stage should not only be enjoyable, but they should "teach the mark" as well.

Bruce L. Olsen, assistant to the president for University Relations, announced recently that Dayley would become full-time director of the division, which includes several of BYU's performing groups. Dayley has been involved in theater part time, but growing demand for his group made it necessary for a full-time director to handle their affairs, Olsen said.

"BYU performing groups have been a part of entertainment that leaves audiences with mixed feelings of awe and consternation," said Dayley.

"It has been my goal as an educator to give the people what they want, and a leader gives them what the people want. We'd like to bridge that gap. We've got to produce to be more than entertainment."

Dayley pointed out that the BYU entertainment groups often interact on the stage with students for students. This interaction is one of his goals to help young people learn to break down the social barriers between artistic disciplines and develop a better understanding of the performing arts.

Newell Dayley, formerly of the music department, has been named as the full-time director of the Entertainment Division.

"We assume that because we have set up an organization with a style that people can't cross those lines," he said. "But who comes out of BYU should be able to do what they want to do."

Dayley, who has composed several of BYU's performing groups, said he hopes to continue itself to the lowest common denominator.

The new director speaks of music and theater as his main areas of experience. He is not only an accomplished performer, but also a producer and conductor of "Peter Pan" and "My Fair Lady."

He has been a faculty member at BYU since 1968, and was director of bands and wind ensemble at the Symphonic Wind Ensemble from 1973 until his retirement.

Dayley, who is listed in the "World Who's Who of Eminent Americans," is a member of the Music Educators National Conference, the College Band Directors National Association (CDBNA), the National Association of Jazz Educators (NAJE), International Trumpet Guild (ITG) and American Society of Composers and Performers (AMCPA).

Lists of credentials like this may be meaningless to those who are not as interested in classical music as Newell Dayley, but to those who are, he is a link between musicians and non-musician alike. He has performed as a soloist in eight western states, first trumpet with the Salt Lake City Symphony Orchestra, and now a performer with shows we segregate with labels.

Still, Dayley isn't resting on his stack of credentials. He is looking to the future.

"I am definitely that I should write much more music," he said.

"I've been given some choice experiences in music, but I'd still feel blessed to have experienced so many things. I think I still feel like I should be giving it back somehow."

Feature show 'Weeknight' added to KBYU fall lineup

For those who like to know everything that's happening in Utah County, KBYU has just the program for you.

It's called "Weeknight," and features not only the local news, but newsmakers, interviews with public officials, and a look at Cougar sports.

Viewers can expect to see the show at least once a week, and will reflect a wide spectrum of information. KBYU-TV cameras will be at the circus, down the street, and in the mountains. You have just seen the film in review.

"Local personalities scheduled to be interviewed include author Marlin Payne and director Hugh Nibley. Interviews with visiting celebrities will be featured in the feature portion."

The community coverage between the Environmental Protection Agency and General Drug abuse in Utah County, and a new program on alcohol education currently being tested in area schools topics that will be covered in the public affairs segment of "Weeknight."

Violinist to perform

Violinist Nathan Milstein will perform in recital with the Utah Symphony Oct. 19 at Salt Lake's Salt Palace Auditorium. It will be Milstein's first appearance in North America this year.

Over the span of his career, Milstein has performed the major concertos in his repertoire. His latest recording won a Grammy award.

The program for his recital includes works by Beethoven, Brahms, and Sibelius. His performance will be on a 1716 Stradivarius violin.

Tickets for the performance may be obtained at the Utah Symphony box office.

Pileup stops 1-15 traffic

Rush hour traffic backed up for almost two hours on the Salt Lake Wednesday afternoon due to a pileup.

According to police at the scene, no one was injured in the chain reaction accident and the cause was unknown.

In the end, two cars were totalled and several others were involved, many smashed beyond recognition.
